Examples for Module 1: Common Structure and Elements

1. More is More!

Since Module 1 is an introductory module outlining the common TEI structure and elements, examples of about everything covered in this chapter can be found in the example chapters of the other modules:

- 2. The TEI header: examples of the TEI header.
- 3. Prose: examples of encodings of textual and non-textual phenomena in prose.
- 4. Poetry: examples of encodings of textual and non-textual phenomena in poetry.
- 5. Drama: examples of encodings of textual and non-textual phenomena in drama.
- 6. Primary Sources: examples of additions, deletions, and omissions.

However, we would like to complete this section for those elements that are only discussed in this module:

- title pages: <titlePage>
- dates and time: <date>, <time>
- numbers and measures: <num>, <measure>
- address: <address> and its components
- analytical features: <note>, <index>
- rendition: <rendition>

Of course, we're depending on you to make this examples section as high quality as possible. If you have and want to share any real-life encoding examples featuring the elements mentioned, please don't hesitate and send your examples to teibyexample@kantl.be!
